

Extended Abstract

Vol 16, Issue 1, Spring - Summer 2025, Ser 31

Analysis of Gender stereotypes in the Published stories of the Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children and Young Adults in the 60s (A and B Age Groups)

Najmeh Hoseini Sarvari*

Mohammad Sadegh Basiri

Mahlasadat Hoseini Saber

Introduction

Socialization is the process through which an unaware child gradually becomes a self-aware, knowledgeable, and skilled individual who respects the values and teachings of the culture into which he or she was born. Socialization occurs when children learn the customs of their respective groups so that they can behave in an acceptable manner within that group. This process requires an emotional connection with models, because children's thoughts, feelings and actions are formed in their connection with close relatives and the wider world. Literary works can be an effective aid in the development and nurturing of these dependencies. Among the creative works of children's and young adult literature, stories are the most fundamental ways of indirectly transmitting concepts and values to children. They prepare children to accept gender roles, identities and norms, values and beliefs based on gender differences.

It is very important to pay attention to how gendered characters and behaviors are represented in children's and adolescent literature; because the characters in the story are involved in events that easily create gender stereotypes in the minds of children, and the younger the child, the less resistant they are to the influences of these stereotypes.

Research Method, Review of Literature and Purpose

The aim of this paper is to identify and analyze how gender stereotypes are represented in the stories suitable for age groups A and B, published by the Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children and Young Adults" between March 1981 and March 1991. The reason for this choice is that early socialization occurs during childhood and this Institute has been recognized by authors, families, and other institutions related to the education of children and adolescents as the most important source of publishing selected works for different age groups of children.

This research was conducted with respect to the most important elements and structural features of the stories, in an analytical-descriptive manner, and the theoretical basis of the discussion is the teachings of the sociology of gender. This analysis can explain the content and extent of the impact of gender stereotypes

* Associate Prof in Persian Language and Literature of Shahid Bahonar University of Kerman, Kerman, Iran.
n.hosseini@uk.ac.ir

DOI: 10.22099/JCLS.2024.47993.2000

COPYRIGHTS ©2021 The author(s). This is an open access article distributed under the terms of the Creative Commons Attribution (CC BY-NC 4.0), which permits unrestricted use, distribution, and reproduction in any medium, as long as the Original authors and source are cited. No permission is required from the authors or the publisher.

presented in these stories on children. This study can also be used by researchers in research related to the works of this institute and the general policies of education in the first years after the Islamic Revolution. Many articles have been written about gender discrimination in textbooks and literary books and magazines for children, some of which are mentioned here: Pourgivi and Zekavat (2010) have analyzed gender roles in the story of "Khale Sooske". In this paper, it is argued that creating gender roles and values related to it as well as the way they are presented to the reader in different ways such as children's literature and internalizing them are all performed by the patriarchal discourse in order to support and continue such systems within the social-cultural context.

Maghsoodi and Tonadvoli (2014) analyzed the social roles of men and women in children's and adolescents' magazines based on the sixteen roles introduced by Parsons. They have concluded that in these stories, men play influential, supporting, or strategic roles, and women often play ordinary roles.

Discussion

The basis of this research is 18 books for the age groups A and B, published by the Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children and Young Adults between March 1981 and March 1991, which are classified under the title of stories. In accordance with the age group of the child audience, all of the works in question are accompanied by images, and among them, three works are visual and without text.

In six of the stories in the studied texts, non-human characters play roles, and the plot of all of these stories is based on the pattern of "exploration" and final success. The characters in the three stories do not have gender identities, but in the three stories, the use of adjectives such as lady, gentleman, aunt, and uncle has determined the gender of the characters, and their actions are in accordance with conventional gender stereotypes.

In only two works narrated by a first-person narrator is the narrator's gender identity hidden in the text, but the absence of the mother and the presence of the father, his role in raising the child, his superior power and dominance, and the child's obedience reinforce gender stereotypes based on the power and authority of the father or man in the child's mind.

In ten stories, the narrator is omniscient and the main character of the story is a human being. The limited omniscient narrator narrates the world from the perspective of a boy whose mindset, desires, and actions form the basis for a plot based on "exploration." Thus, physical activity, exploration, and curiosity are attributed to boys; that is, all the activities on which gender stereotypes define men and masculinity. Also, the images presented of the family have specific designs: father, mother and two children, the first of whom is always a boy. In this model, women are not excluded from the text, but unlike men and boys who enjoy a variety of work and activities, jobs, and clothing, women are homogenized in not having a job, in the same type of clothing they wear, and in the type of interests and daily activities they have. In this way, all the characteristics attributed to men are taken away from women: strength, self-confidence, exploration, and resourcefulness are attributed to men, and weakness, helplessness, passivity, and dependence are attributed to women.

In three picture books without text, the characters are just the boy and his grandfather. The grandfather is the source of the child's awareness and familiarity with nature, life, work, and exploration and her image, despite all this effectiveness, is the complete opposite of the stereotypical image of the weak and sick grandmother in some stories. In addition, the stereotypical male faces seen in all picture books show confidence, strength, and seriousness and stand in contrast with the dependence, weakness, and kindness seen in the images of women.

Conclusion

The results of this research show that, except for three works in which non-human characters play roles, gender stereotypes are explicitly and implicitly defined and instilled in children in all the stories discussed. The main character of all stories in which humans play a role is a curious and creative boy. In all stories, men play a prominent role in the beginning, ending, and progression of the plot; their field of work is outside the home, they have different appearances, occupations, and interests, and with their actions, resourcefulness, and authority, they play the role of helpers, legislators, and guides. Women appear in only a few stories and with the same appearance, and in traditional roles of the weak little sister, the dependent, patient mother, or the sick and infirm grandmother. Therefore, these stories define femininity based on gender stereotypes such as housewifery, lack of logic and nagging, weakness and helplessness, calmness and tolerance, obedience and kindness, and the like.

These stories normalize gender discrimination by instilling gender stereotypes and establishing precise and contradictory boundaries between female and male roles and in this way, they are effective in preparing children of age groups A and B to accept and internalize the entire structure of relationships between men and women as part of their gender role and in turn, they reproduce, repeat, and perpetuate forms of gender discrimination.

Key Words: "Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children and Young Adults", Children's Literature", Story", "Gender stereotypes", "A and B Age categories"

References

- A group of writers. (2007). Feminism and Opinions. Compiled by Ezazi, Sh. Second edition. Tehran: Rowshangaran & Women's Studies. [in Persian]
- Ahmadi, A.R. (1985 A). I have the seven days of the week. Illustrated by Dadgar, M. Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]
- Ahmadi, A.R. (1985 B). Seven bows, seven colors. Illustrated by Mohammadiyan, H. Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]
- Alqash, K. (1984). The Journey of the Smart Chicken. Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]
- Amirqasemi, M. (1984). Little elephant, where is your nose? Illustrated by Dehqan, M. Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]
- Behmadi Moghaddas, N Zarghani, S.M; Yaghoobi Janbeh sarai, P. (2017). "A Study of Gender in Children's and Young Adults' Poetry from the Perspective of Sociology of the Body." Literary Theory and Criticism, 1(2), 105-123. <https://dor.isc.ac/dor/20.1001.1.74767387.1395.1.2.5.0> [in Persian]
- Eslam, A; Norouzi, Z; Nazari, F. (2013). A Sociological Analysis of Gender in Name-hayee be Aqa-Ghooleh (Letters to Mister Giant). Journal of Children's Literature Studies, 4(1), 1-20. <https://doi.org/10.22099/jcls.2013.1144> [in Persian]
- Garret, S. (2001). Gender. (K .Baqaei, Trans.). Tehran: Digar. [in Persian]
- Gerowgan, H. (1981). Ahmad should ask. Illustrated by Garusi, A. Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]
- Gianini, Belotti, E. (2006). On the Side of Little Girls. (M. J. Pooyandeh, Trans.). Sixth edition. Tehran: Ney. [in Persian]
- Giddens, A. (2008). Sociology. (H. Chavoshiyan, Trans.). Second edition Tehran: Ney. [in Persian]
- Haji Nasrallah, Sh. (2003). The role of gender role models for Iranian children. Research Journal of Children's and Adolescent Literature, 32, 43-52. [in Persian]
- Hejazi, B. (1998). Children's and Adolescent Literature: Characteristics and Aspects. Second edition. Tehran: Rowshangaran & Women's Studies. [in Persian]
- Hejvani, M. (1999). Lost audiences. Research Journal of Children's and Adolescent Literature, 19, 42-49. [in Persian]
- Hunt, Peter and Others. (1999). Understanding Children's Literature. Ed. by Peter Hunt. Oxon, Routledge.
- Kalantari, P. (1985). Where is Haj Rahim Aqa's house? Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]
- Khosronejad, M & Others. (2021). In Quest for the Centre: Greats of children's literature Theory and Criticism. Second edition. Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]
- Khosronejad, M. (2003). Innocence and Experience. Tehran: Markaz. [in Persian]
- O'Sullivan, E. (2019). Comparative Children's Literature. Translated by Jalali, M & Farhangi, M. Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]

- Levorato, A. (2020). Language and Gender in the Fairy tale tradition. (A.Davoodi, Trans.). Tehran: Farhameh. [in Persian]
- McCaffrey, A. (2003). Toward horizons that no man or woman has ever reached" (K.Vrzi, Trans.). Research Journal of Children's and Adolescent Literature, 32, 4-13. [in Persian]
- Maghsoodi, S; Tonadvoli, S. (2014). Survey of Gender and Social roles in Children's journals. Quarterly of Social Studies and Research in Iran, 2(1), 121-139. <https://doi.org/10.22059/jisr.2014.52466> [in Persian]
- Michel, A. (1997). No to Stereotypes: Overcoming Sexism in Books and Textbooks. (M. J. Pooyandeh, Trans.). Tehran: Negah. [in Persian]
- Moeini. M. (1984). Dalli. Illustrated by Kalantari. P. Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]
- Moeini. M. (1984). Noali 1. Illustrated by Masoomiyan. M. Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]
- Moeini. M. (1984). Noali 2. Illustrated by Masoomiyan. M. Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]
- Mohammadi, M. H. (1999). Methodology in Criticism of Children's Literature. Tehran: Soroush. [in Persian]
- Namdar, H. (1981). Chef Squirrel. Illustrated by Khosravi. N. Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]
- Nikolajeva, M. (2019). Aesthetic approaches to Children's literature an Introduction. (M. Hejvani and F. Zamani, Trans.). Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]
- Norton, D. (2003). Through the Eyes of a Child: An Introduction to Children's literature. (M. Rami, S. Qezelayaq and Others, Trans.). Tehran: Qalamrow. [in Persian]
- Parsons, Linda T.(2004). Ella evolving: Cinderella stories and the construction of gender appropriate behavior. Children's Literature in Education, 35(2), 135-154.
- Piaget, J. (2015). Imitation in Childhood. (Z. Toufiq, Trans.). Third edition. Tehran: Ney. [in Persian]
- Pooya, S. (1986). Where is my tail? Illustrated by Mazloomipour. S. Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]
- Pourgiv, F; Zekavat. M. (2011). A Study of Gender Roles in Khale Sooske. Journal of Children's Literature Studies, 1(2), 105-123. <https://doi.org/10.22099/jcls.2012.436> [in Persian]
- Reynolds, K. (2015). Children's Literature: A very short introduction. (M.Hejvani, Trans.). Tehran: Ofoq. [in Persian]
- Sadeqh Ja'fari, J. (2008). Women's role in children literature: A review emphasizing socio-political Changes. Women's Studies Sociological and Psychological, 6(1), 71-90. <https://doi.org/10.22051/jwsps.2008.1289> [in Persian]
- Sangari, M. R. (2011). A window into a childish paradise. Tehran: khorshidbaran. [in Persian]
- Sarshar, M. R. (2009). A look at children's and Youth literature before and after the Revolution. Tehran: Iranian's Pen Association. [in Persian]
- Seyedabadi, A. A. (2009). Children's and adolescent literature and prescriptive identity. Research Journal of Children's and Adolescent Literature, 42, 37-42. [in Persian]
- Shams, M.R. (1986). If this wood were mine. Illustrated by Omumi, A.R. Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]
- Shoarinejad, A. A. (1991). Children's literature. Fifteenth edition. Tehran: Ettelaat. [in Persian]
- Taerpoor, F. (1985). Ahmad and Sara. Illustrated by Masoomiyan. M. Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]
- Taerpoor, F. (1986). Ahmad and clock. Illustrated by Masoomiyan. M. Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]
- Taherahmadi, M. (2003). From the Children's Book Council to the Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults (1962-1978). Treasure of documents, 7(51 & 52), 83-89. [in Persian]
- Taqi, Sh. (1985). Axe. Illustrated by Dehqan. M. Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]

- Taqi, Sh. (1986). The most beautiful song. Illustrated by Taqavi, N. Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]
- Taqi, Sh. (1987). When spring came. Illustrated by Khorshidpoor, A. Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]
- Tavakoliyan, N. (1984). Ahmad and nini koochooloo (Little baby). Illustrated by Masoomiyan, M. Tehran: Institute for the Intellectual Development of Children & Young Adults. [in Persian]
- Yaghmaei, J. & Khandan, M. (2004). Child and study. Tehran: Ketabdar. [in Persian]